With headquarters in Paisley and installation teams covering the whole of mainland Scotland, Greener Energy Group Limited specialise in providing homeowners with efficient heating and renewable energy solutions. The business was established in 2014, and the talented team have a combined industry experience of more than 30 years in helping customers save money on their energy bills, leading air source heat pump installations in Scotland since 2018. Greener Energy Group offers the latest technology in renewable heating solutions and energy efficient products, including air source heat pumps, German electric heating, A-rated boilers, solar panels, and battery storage.

Introducing renewable energy solutions will bring long-term benefits – financially and for the environment. By investing in renewables, homeowners can take control of their own energy usage, generate free, clean energy, and avoid increasing energy prices. Battery technology means that homeowners can generate energy from solar panels and efficiently store it until it is required, resulting in much less wastage and a significantly lower financial burden. Air source heating is an efficient upgrade from traditional boilers such as LPG or oil and sees customers reduce not only their carbon footprint, but also their energy bills. Now with a hybrid option, customers on mains gas can integrate an air source heat pump with a gas boiler to get the benefits of both systems. Greener Energy Group takes their customers through the whole process of investing in home renewables, getting a picture of what solution is best suited to them through a free home assessment, before completing a professional installation service. The company further serves customers by guiding them through relevant paperwork and funding schemes allowing them to spread the cost over a series of interest-free monthly payments, or via a buy now pay later option.

The judging panel was impressed by the company's excellent after-sales service. Greener Energy Group has an attentive after-sales division, ensuring customers get the very best out of their new installation and offering long-term support. Their annual servicing plans provide coverage for customers across the country, receiving the benefits of the group's highly trained engineers, who maintain the heating systems efficiency and safety, and keep the warranty up to date. The company's excellent Trustpilot reviews often remark on the approachable nature of its employees, on the phone and in-person, and how friendly and professional its installation experts are.
